

Re: Shades of gray?

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-03/msg02103.html>

- From: "Liz" <lizhug1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 25 Mar 2006 18:09:21 -0500
-

Gray is my favorite color. <G>

"CindyB" <cinqueen@xxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:c2bb22t82k21tm22no7u7s8fk62dssdovo@xxxxxxxx

Mostly lurking and often ignoring threads that get too long and controversial, I have a question to ask.

For those of you with very strong beliefs on certain subjects, is it always black and white or is there ever a shade of gray?

For me, everything is a shade of gray. It all depends on the circumstances.

However, I've noticed that there are some who post to smt who feel strongly about certain things and there don't seem to be any gray areas, no room for individual circumstances. Everything is black or white, right or wrong. Am I reading them wrong or is this really the way they are?

Do most people know exactly where they stand on any given topic? I used to be like that but as I get older, I've become aware that the world is not always black and white.

Am I in the minority? Am I wishy-washy or, as some politicians are called, a waffler?

I don't know if I envy or pity those who see no gray.