Comes down to the fact that each form of writing has a style guide:
Novels, newspapers, scientific journals, etc. The style guide accepted for medical reports says it is okay. I've decided to drop the hyphen. I can arrange for my software to do it automatically w/o me thinking about it, but this is a great example of silly nitpicking that will cost some MT her job or some MTSO a good MT.

If an MT loses work over followup, follow-up, follow up confusion, my guess is that there is more to the situation than just that.

You're right. And I really can't believe that in the throes of tomato seedling time I'm actually wasting time arguing over such a trivial matter!!
