

Re: OT – I may be in the minority

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-05/msg00865.html>

- From: "Barbara Carlson" <bbcarlson@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 6 May 2006 21:51:01 -0400
-

Anyone who believes the Muslin religion is based on hatred is either ignorant or sadly misinformed! Muhammad was a very remarkable man. He won victories and freedom for his people. The Koran, which Muslims believe is God's word delivered through Muhammad (who was illiterate) is a very beautiful book. I have read an English translation of it. I have Muslin friends.

Lumping all Muslims with al Quida (don't know how to spell that) would be like lumping all Christians with the likes of Falwell or other radical Christians. I think it is safe to say most Christians are not that extreme.

Religious extremism is a dangerous thing—in any religion.

Barb C.

"RaeMorrill" <RaeMorrill@xxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:Ju57g.24031\$ZQ3.10903@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

It's really no different than Muslims. Most of us believe they are a religion based on hatred. There are those Muslims who say they are not. Most of us don't pay them much mind because of what we see being done by the big-mouth zealots. Same thing here. Some may consider Falwell and his ilk idiots and laughing stock, but they are no laughing matter. A good number of people hang on their every word as if it comes from the throne of GOD himself.

Anne Vasquez wrote:

I certainly won't deny that there are some prominent figures out there, putting a nasty face on the whole religion. However, people with any sense know that you just can't use a wide brush to paint ANY large group of people. Anyone who uses their religion to further a personal agenda is straying pretty far from its intent, IMO.

RaeMorrill wrote:

I don't think he believes that, but it is the face of Christianity

Re: OT – I may be in the minority

in this country today.