Well, I'm cold all the time so welcome our upcoming 80 as long as the humidity doesn't come with it. We had a couple of high humidity days this last month that were horrid. I do recall those when I lived in Florida and Wisconsin and don't want that crapola ever again! It could be 75 and the humidity was 90 and it felt like 140 degrees and the air I swear feels like you have to push your way through it. Tuesday it's supposed to hit 90! Around here that is death! Hopefully the breeze we have continues. I may be cold all the time, but once I'm not, I'm a very ugly pissant bitch! Trust me every one is happy when I whine about I need a sweater. I love being too cold and needing a sweater. you can always put more clothes on but honey it ain't too pretty if I have to start removing and removing does not make you more comfortable in the heat --- NOTHING makes you more comfortable in the heat and EVERYONE is crabby! So Judy I can relate! I do not envy you at all! You have my permission to bitch slap the "happy" weather guy! :)

With temperature up to 97 today and going into the three digits per those disgustingly happy TV weathermen for the next couple days, I'm trapped inside my home. Just going across the road to my mailbox burned me like an overcooked hamburger, despite a slathering of sunscreen. That, by the way, is not a typo; the dry heat here in northern California does make me want to scream, unlike that nice muggy weather I use to enjoy back in New England.

I want some rain, and I want it NOW.
