It seems that the full moon has brought out both my blonde-ness and my 100% Polish heritage. ;-)

Why isn't it "Worker's" compensation? You aren't compensating all of them, just ones that are injured. What makes it even more confusing to me is that it used to be "Workmans Compensation." Shouldn't that be -men if they really meant it to be plural?

The website <http://www.workerscompensation.com/> doesn't help me – they use Workers, Workers' and Worker's.

Unfortunately, I've overthought this and made quite a convincing case for both with and without the apostrophe – can somebody clear this up? It seems I wonder about this every 6 years or so but this time it's really making me crazy.

(Rest assured that once somebody posts an answer, I'm going to slap my forehead and be embarrassed that this is forever on the internet attached to my name, but at least I won't lose sleep pondering this!)
