

Re: P*ss on 'em

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-08/msg01064.html>

- From: Margie <nomoremargiesjunk@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 25 Jul 2006 19:57:19 GMT
-

Mary,

What a drag. Many of us have been there, done that. Doesn't make it any easier. We are all vulnerable, no matter how "loyal" we think our clients may be or how long we've been doing their work.

Margie

On 25 Jul 2006 12:35:50 -0700, "im1whalen@xxxxxxx" <im1whalen@xxxxxxx> wrote:

I have been casual hire for a hospital since last March...only because they let their contract lapse with the company they were using and I used to work in-house and then as an IC for them, and they begged me to help them out. About six weeks ago all their support quit – refused to work anymore; SO, IT WAS JUST ME. Then they found another ex-employee who was willing to help out – but it took them two weeks to get her hooked up. ANYWAY – just tried to get on the system to type and its a new system – couldn't get on. Called the powers that be... "Oh, MedQuist started today." Well thanks a whole helluva a lot for the notice!!!! Just venting...thanks....Mary