When I was teaching SCUBA diving in the Keys I got to dread it when I saw my students were from Texas! They were the most obnoxious (not all, I had a good friend from Texas, too.) They were the most difficult to teach because they knew more than I did and obviously resented a woman teaching them. I got called "little lady" once (which I definitely am not). I cured a couple of them by letting them get into difficulty by not following my advice (not life threatening, of course, but enough to make them listen the next time).

At that time my son was teaching skiing in Colorado and I found he had the same opinion of Texans that I did! And used some of the same tactics teaching! He gave me this mental picture of the stereotypical Texan flying down the slopes in their fur coat and cowboy hat! Somehow that picture flashes into view whenever someone mentions Texas.

My Texan friend, who was really a very nice person, used to remind me that ALL Texans weren't like that.

So good to know I'm not the only one with an aversion to Texas. I like to say that the longest week of my life was the 33 hours I spent in Houston one year <g>

Hey, I was born in Alaska. You can't be more of a Northern bitch than that!
My best friend lives in Texas (can't visit her I refuse to go to Texas)
Another friend lives in Alabama, I might go see her, but can't set my foot in Texas! I've hated it since I was 10!

I was picturing the response of some of the southern women

I know...

They're people I do NOT want pissed off at me! <G>

Er.....WHAT?

Obviously you've never met a strong southern woman.
