

Re: "Unusual" side effect

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2006-09/msg00149.html>

- From: "Susan Mitchell" <medlawtrans@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 2 Sep 2006 00:10:03 -0700
-

I had a friend that took it and it caused her to eat in her sleep. She would wake up with food in her mouth (a partially eaten sandwich, or crackers) with no memory of getting up and going into the kitchen and making a sandwich or getting anything to eat. It's a wonder she never choked to death! No thanks!

--
Sue --- Firefighter mom --- Still Rabid UW Dawg Fan!
(to reply send to medlawtrans@xxxxxxxxxxxx)
"Christie" <Christie.2dh3d0@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:Christie.2dh3d0@xxxxxxxxxxxx

Yep, it's the funky sleeping pill. Every single person I've spoken to that takes it has some pretty psychedelic side effects if they don't go to sleep immediately. It's kind of tricky, because it kicks in very quickly (about 10 minutes).
(Oddly, though, drowsiness isn't one of the side effects that I get unless I put my head on the pillow.)

I did hear further elaboration that the patient sleepwalks when she takes Ambien, which makes a lot more sense. But unfortunatley, that's not what's going on her note.

--
Christie