On Tue, 12 Dec 2006 16:21:52 GMT, RaeMorrill <RaeMorrill@xxxxxxx> tossed a dime in the pot and said:

I guess if that is "good enough" for the clients, it doesn't matter much. I could probably type way more and be at least that accurate if I didn't proofread. If I were willing to do that, I could lower my rates and still make more money.

It's "good enough" because many of them are absolutely convinced they can't get better, at any price. And if you're going to get crap, it might as well be cheap crap.
