I agree about Panasonic, but some foot pedals have to be "installed." If a disc did not come with it, you might check the web site, but my first transcriber was a Panasonic. It failed and was replaced/repared twice within the warranty, and the next time it failed out of warranty, I trashed it. Better a used good one than a new Panasonic.

Can anyone give me any ideas other than yelling at Panasonic about this?

Uh, yeah. Store that Panasonic transcriber where it belongs (in the garbage can LOL) and get a reconditioned one (Lanier, Dictaphone, or old-school Sony Memoscriber) from Bob King at www.transcribers.com for probably the same price. Once I did that, I never needed another one again.

And if you're in the San Francisco Bay Area, you're welcome to borrow one of mine until you can get another one. I'm not using them right at this very minute.
