

Okay...time for updates...

Okay...time for updates...

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2008-01/msg01017.html>

- From: Jeannie <jwilson421@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sat, 26 Jan 2008 08:38:41 -0600
-

Okay, so I am procrastating...I have a HUGE pile of work to do and figured I would start a thread on "updates". I often wonder how everyone is doing since it's been so quiet around here and figure I'll start.....

I have been absolutely swamped with work. I have never seen it this busy on a consistant basis year-round like I have over the last year. It is great but boy are my fingers tired!!

We now have 3 horses. Romeo, my son's horse, is a now 6yo Belgian/QH cross gelding who is the greatest horse ever. He LOVES my son. He's a bit stubborn and I feel like he is acting like a snotty teenager sometimes (the horse) but he is great for my son. My son is starting the local show circuit on him next week so it will be a busy year. My DH bought me a Polish bred Arabian gelding (Descos) for my birthday. He is 19 but you sure couldn't tell. He LOVES TO GO and is taller and bigger than your normal Arabian. He is one of the most affectionate horses I have ever seen. We added our third "baby" the Wednesday before Christmas. His name is Dasher and he is a big paint with two blue eyes. He is 7 and very collected and good-natured. He is really fitting into his new home nicely and he and the younger gelding, Romeo, are pastured together. They play like kids and love the Jolly ball I bought them. I have never seen horses play like those two and it is a ton of fun to watch.

We moved into our new house at the end of October and are still hoping and praying that we sell our old house SOON! Fortunately work is plentiful so the two payments aren't killing us but I sure can think of other stuff to spend that money on. LOL! I love our new house and sure can't wait to get it all "mine". We don't have grass yet because of the drought and then it got too cold to plant sod so I am waiting on spring to come so I can have a grass yard!!

Home school is going GREAT!! My son and I love it and if I would've known how much we would love it I would have started doing it years ago. Third grade is a tough grade for him as far as math goes but he is doing well and his lowest test score so far is a 98. He has kept busy socially with the 4-H horse group at the barn where we board our horse, playing football and we are taking him today to sign up for spring baseball. He is a good baseball player (pardon my bragging) and I am so excited to see how he plays this year.

Okay...time for updates...

Okay...time for updates...

Okay.....I guess that's about it. NEXT.....

.