

I have figured part of it out.

I have figured part of it out.

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2008-06/msg00611.html>

- From: Blupencl <Blupencl.3b3rfs@xx>
 - Date: Mon, 16 Jun 2008 14:37:00 +0000
-

The idea of Obama winning the presidency just gives me the freakin willies. I really, really thought Hillary would win!

I have always known I am not prejudiced against him because he is of mixed race. I know that he is not Muslim. He's a very accomplished person. He's not a dummy by any means.

My family all came over yesterday. My brother and his wife are so pro-Obama it is insane, just like I was pro-Clinton. We've really not discussed it much because it's like gasoline and a match, and because I'm not a political person. I can never really defend my feelings because I don't know enough about it.

I know I am a Democrat. I am scared to death to have another Repub administration in there. But I just went nuts when Clinton conceded. OMG it was awful, I was so sad!

So I sat here and thought about it a lot. I think I am prejudiced against him because he seems like a foreigner to me! Not because he is brown, not because his wife is black, but because he doesn't seem like an American. If his name were John Smith, I might not have such a problem with it. It's because of his childhood and background.

I am so confused. I also think, for some insane reason, that he will throw us white folk in the trash – which is just plain goofy. I don't think the white bread white guys will throw black people in the trash, I never think about it.

This is the only time in my life I have been so confused about an election. I feel as if I have no vote!

—
Blupencl

Blupencl's Profile: <http://www.scribera.org/forum/member.php?userid=369>
View this thread: <http://www.scribera.org/forum/showthread.php?t=6818>

I have figured part of it out.

I have figured part of it out.