

Re: Anybody know about Gold Beach, OR?

Re: Anybody know about Gold Beach, OR?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med.transcription/2008-07/msg00404.html>

- From: "Neal" <nealbrown1@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 29 Jul 2008 15:04:28 -0600
-

Thanks for the info, Kathy!

Reason for picking Gold Beach? Beats me – I think it was near something I saw on the Rogue Rive. I fell in love with the Oregon coastline when we drove there a couple of summers ago. We didn't go to any beaches at that time, thoughf (dammit)

I am mad at the dingbat right now, so will probably go out there by myself to look things over. Basic idea is to buy a used MH like I do here, but for myself. I saw one online in Gold Beach that looked fairly good – with an ocean view. That is what I want, in addition to being able to breath better.

Other ideas, towns, places to see, and people to do will be greatly depreciated.

Neal

"Kathycarp" <k@thyc@rp@comc@st.net> wrote in message
news:58GdnbPZ-KdeHRLVnZ2dnUVZ_rDinZ2d@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

Neal,

I know Gold Beach. I'm not sure it is the prettiest beach in Oregon, (though I love all coastal towns) and it's a long trip to "the valley" to a larger town (Grants Pass, Medford, Ashland). Brookings, just a little south of Gold Beach is called "the banana belt" of Oregon in that it typically has good (better) weather than the other coastal towns. Have you ever lived in a coastal town? I'm not sure you would tolerate the weather on the Oregon coast, especially having come from hot and dry (assuming you like the climate in NM). Maybe you saw the Oregon coast during the summer, and it was good weather. When it's beautiful, it's BEAUTIFUL, but most of the year it is rainy, cold, and foggy. That's why I've often told Judy that she should move to the Oregon coast. She would love the weather.

Also, the shopping is.... "small town". Very small town. A few of the mid and northern coastal towns have grown tremendously over the last 10 years and have most chain stores, but Gold Beach... I'm not sure. Haven't been there for a few years.

Re: Anybody know about Gold Beach, OR?

