

Symptoms of testicular cancer

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2004-08/0413.html>

From: J (learning_at_example.org)

Date: 08/05/04

Date: Thu, 05 Aug 2004 06:29:21 -0400

I've sometimes seen some of these symptoms mentioned here (by posters).

FYI and FWIW

J

http://hcd2.bupa.co.uk/fact_sheets/Mosby_factsheets/testicular_cancer.html

"Symptoms of testicular cancer

The most common symptom of testicular cancer is a lump, irregularity or swelling in one testicle. Other symptoms that may be present are:

- * a pulling sensation or feeling of unusual heaviness in the scrotum
- * a dull ache in the groin or lower abdomen
- * pain or discomfort (which may come and go) in the testicle or scrotum
- * tenderness or enlargement of tissue in the breast area
- * a sudden collection of fluid in the scrotum (called a hydrocele).

Most lumps in the scrotum are not testicular cancer. However, anyone who notices one or more of the symptoms above should see their GP for advice."