

Re: Please Help with Diagnosis

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2004-08/0756.html>

From: Bob (this one) (Bob_at_nospam.com)

Date: 08/08/04

Date: Sun, 08 Aug 2004 03:48:07 -0400

Steve Harris sbharris@ROMAN9.netcom.com wrote:

> nospam5@heartmdphd.com (Dr. Andrew B. Chung, MD/PhD) wrote in message news:<9fcab6f7.0408071045.5e5be8d@posting.google.com>...

>

>>There is evidence the prayer by others for someone who is ill improves >>clinical outcomes even if the patient is unaware that others are >>praying for them.

>

> Cite please. If you cite Lobo, et al., prepare for very negative > information. This is science, and it's a no bullshit zone. Though we > know you try.

Chung says there was an actual flood that covered the whole earth and that there's evidence for it, although when asked for cites, he provided none. Evidence to the contrary went unremarked.

He also says that there was a single Eve around 200,000 years ago who gave birth to all humans. Says mitochondrial DNA proves it even though the latest understandings about its operation says that the original premises are incorrect and the notion is likely not the case.

His "information" about nutrition, caloric usage and caloric content of foods is in the same league.

> One cannot imagine how your mind must work to think of yourself in a > world in which God cares for people, but doesn't get off his > hands/tentacles/ghostly manipulators to help them when they are > manifestly in medical trouble, unless some stranger asks. And then, > only sometimes. Say what??

You know he's going to say that we can't fathom God's plan. And that God works on different logical bases far beyond our comprehension. I wonder how he can know that if it's all so far over our heads. He's gonna say again that God told him. I only posted this because I want to save him the trouble of poking his macros again. Christian charity, doncha know.

sci.med: Re: Please Help with Diagnosis

Bob