

Re: Psychological impacts on students of harmful animal use

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2004-08/3711.html>

From: Michael Saunby (msaunby_at_despammed.com)

Date: 08/30/04

Date: Mon, 30 Aug 2004 21:59:57 +0100

"pearl" <tea@signguestbook.ie> wrote in message news:ch01b6$uhe$1@kermit.esat.net...

[snip]

> That the most compassionate and ethical students are also those most > commonly turned away from careers in the life and health sciences by > such experiences in schools, despite the fact that it is precisely these > students we most need as our future doctors and scientists, is a cruel > irony our educators must take full responsibility for.
>

Surely "we" don't need these people to become doctors, they're not really suited to it since most likely they wouldn't find it pleasant working with sick and/or aggressive people either. Best that they be recruited to the army where they might do some real good.

Michael Saunby