

Number of Plastic Surgeries Rises! Can this trend be stopped?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2005-12/msg00110.html>

- From: vasilijepetkovic@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 9 Dec 2005 01:21:43 -0800
-

Hello All,

Look at the image below, look at that face that endured dozens of Plastic Surgeries, countless rhinoplasty, chin implants, face lifts, liposuction, etc. and you will have to ask your self: What the hell is going on? Why are we doing this to ourselves?

<http://www.igman.com/misc/plastic-surgery-risks/>

Does social pressure to look young influence the individual to such extent that he or she will risk their own health (think Michael Jackson) in order to improve the external appeal and look more beautiful?

Do these individuals (the ones who resort to i.e. rhinoplasty) consider possibility of plastic surgery complications?

Plastic surgery complications can range from minor scarring to lethal fatalities. It is known that the effects of such a surgery can sometimes be traumatizing to patients and their families in a both psychical and psychological way.

And, even all these facts are well known, the number of plastic surgeries performed every year is increasing?

Is there a hope that this trend will be stopped?

Best,

Vasko

.

- Prev by Date: more about TRANSFERIN , please
- Next by Date: Re: What happened in the ER?

Number of Plastic Surgeries Rises! Can this trend be stopped?

- Previous by thread: more about TRANSFERIN, please
- Next by thread: eye cell implants improve motor symptoms in parkinson patients
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread