

Is mold really that bad?

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2005-12/msg00224.html>

- From: delshannon@xxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 19 Dec 2005 12:17:15 -0800
-

I have some mold in my carpet at the entrance to my apartment where parts of the ceiling fall this past summer following a tremendous rainfall. There was an opening in the ceiling for about three years until it grew larger. I wonder whether this mold can be contributing to my discomfort that began this past summer? I thought I had lyme disease, restless legs syndrome, etc. I had slept on the living room floor up till a kind friend gave me a mattress, boxspring and bed frame that he had to throw out anyway because he was evicted from an apartment across the street. I've since put up the bed in my living room but will have to move it into the bedroom soon so the living room can be remodeled. I have a small apt so it won't be easy; also have items in a storage room in the basement where the steps aren't easy to climb down carrying items; there is only one railing. Landlord won't put another railing because he thinks the space will be narrower!!

.

- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: Is mold really that bad?
 - ◇ From: amanda
 - ◆ Re: Is mold really that bad?
 - ◇ From: amanda
- Prev by Date: Re: which organization to contact to get a breast sepcilaist or surgeon name in this area
- Next by Date: Re: Is mold really that bad?
- Previous by thread: Re: CLEAR act too little, too late for THESE American victims of illegal aliens
- Next by thread: Re: Is mold really that bad?
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date

Is mold really that bad?

◆ Thread