

Re: Is mold really that bad?

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2005-12/msg00226.html>

---

- From: "amanda" <amanda772005@xxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: 19 Dec 2005 17:36:15 -0800
-

Don't sleep on the floor. Make sure that the bed and mattress are mold free.

If landlord doesn't clean your place, call the environmental agency or any organization you can complain about the quality of the unit.

The management at my place did air-duct cleaning for me after finally threatend them to inform environmental agency. I was getting weird feeling (not fever) like my eyes were so sleepy but I wasn't sleepy after moving into that place but it was before I started school.

I got them to do carpet shampooing do with a special condition of going over with just water after the shampooing to make sure of getting all trace chemical. Since then, I learned about Dry-Chem Cleaning that uses a very mild solution. Witht hat I don't have to worry about the carpet not dryign thoroughly and developing mold.

You must act quickly. You don't even need to go to a doctor and get skin allergy etsts and all that first to get them clean the place and prevention for forming mold. Do google search for mold and Houston and will find a lot of articles.

BTW, I started using Sharper Image Ionic Air Purier in my bed room. Needs no filter; just clean by wiping blade. I just have a nasl condition and so this small ozone form the machine helps me. Without making your dwelling place clean first, no air purifer would help you.

Good luck.

.

---

- Follow-Ups:
  - ◆ Re: Is mold really that bad?
  - ◇ From: delshannon

Re: Is mold really that bad?

- References:

- ◆ Is mold really that bad?

- ◆ From: delshannon

- Prev by Date: Re: Is mold really that bad?

- Next by Date: Stress and the immune system

- Previous by thread: Re: Is mold really that bad?

- Next by thread: Re: Is mold really that bad?

- Index(es):

- ◆ Date

- ◆ Thread