Re: New York Times: Free Drug Samples? Bad Idea, Some Say

Source: http://sci.tech−archive.net/Archive/sci.med/2007−05/msg00033.html

- From: Kurt Ullman <kurtullman@xxxxxxxxx>
- Date: Wed, 02 May 2007 22:23:50 GMT

In article
<Jason−0205071620540001@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>,
Jason@xxxxxxxxxx (Jason) wrote:

> Someone in another newsgroup mentioned a small drug company that was > developing a drug that would CURE some types of kidney diseases. A huge > drug company was already selling a medicaiton that was designed to TREAT > at least one of those kidney diseases. That huge drug company purchased > the rights to that medication that could cure some types of kidney > diseases. Lots of people that had kidney diseases were HOPING that new > drug would eventually cure their kidneys diseases. GUESS WHAT? That huge > drug company did continue to develop that medication. The reason is > related to MONEY. They knew that they could make much more money by NEVER > developing that medicaiton that could cure some types of kidney disease.
> They could make much more money from their medications that could TREAT > those kidney diseases. Follow the money. Don't ask me for proof since I > failed to write down the name of that drug

Just out of personal curiosity, you got any names of medications and names of companies to go with that?
.