

Re: material properties of 3d nanotube matrix

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.nanotech/2004-07/0099.html>

From: Jimi (abc_at_def.com)

Date: 07/28/04

Date: 28 Jul 2004 01:55:30 GMT

On 27 Jul 2004 20:07:58 GMT, "Michael McGaha"

<michael@electricdreams.com> wrote:

>

>

> "Michael Richards" <Michael.Richards@Gartner.com> wrote in message > news:ce39k602esa@enews4.newsguy.com...

>>

>> Firstly, I have nothing definitive regarding the possible self-healing >> properties of nanodiamond, just speculation, which I usually try to >> avoid. I can't find a link to my original reference, but searching on >> Google using "self-healing" and "Richard Smalley" yielded several >> results, including this interesting one:

>> * <http://worldandi.misto.cz/MAIL/article/nsapr99.html>

>

> Thanks for the link. I'll check it out tonight when I have more time to > read.

>

>>

>> Michael

>>

>> PS I think you are probably the first person to actually read through >> the site, rather than just skimming it. :-)

>>

>

> Shoot... I read through it going back and forth looking at stuff. Was a very > nice presentation. And thanks for the welcome to the group.

>

> Michael

>

Has anyone considered that this material would be lighter than air?
Perhaps it could be used a durable permanent floating platform/airship?