

Re: Ultraviolet "Barlow" lens?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.optics/2007-09/msg00072.html>

- From: Louis Boyd <boyd@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 20 Sep 2007 21:58:55 -0700
-

Thanks for the tip. I found the Opto Sigma UV achromats. The ones that have large enough aperture are $2000 each but the show stopper is that none have negative focal lengths. A further search for other manufactures hasn't produced useful results.

Bret Cannon wrote:

Opto Sigma has a line of UV achromats that you might look at. I don't know how they would do for you application, but they are CaF₂/fused silica doublets as I recall.