

Re: Zeiss S-Planar and M-Planar 120mm

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.optics/2008-05/msg00022.html>

- From: Dieter Michel <dmichel@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 07 May 2008 00:44:07 +0200
-

Hi Georg,

short addendum to my own posting: S-Planar also seems to be Zeiss's label for lenses optimized for copy work, although it is found on some of their macro lenses as well. Maybe it's a hint that an S-Planar sold as a macro lens may be derived from the optical construction of a copy lens.

Talking about rodenstock, for example, I know that they have macro/copy lenses (Apo-Rodagon D) derived from their enlarging lenses and that they come optimized for different magnification factors (1:2 or 1:1 for example).

Best regards

Dieter Michel

.