[Hammond]

fact is, McDermid is erroneous when he refers to "George's definition of existence". there is no such thing. George simply agrees with SCIENCE'S DEFINITION OF EXISTENCE, which is:

SCIENCE'S DEFINITION OF EXISTENCE

Only "observables" exist. And an Observable is that which is "capable in principle of being observed by a human being".

Hence. if there are no human beings, then the Universe does not "exist".

I would have to ask that people quit calling this "Hammond's" definition of existence. Clearly it is NOT. It is the underlying definition of existence assumed by the entire field of SCIENCE. And it was discovered by THEM, not ME.
