

Re: Re : What before big bang?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics.relativity/2004-09/4024.html>

From: YBM (ybmess_at_nooos.fr)

Date: 09/14/04

Date: Wed, 15 Sep 2004 01:14:33 +0200

John Baez a écrit :

> In article <4144de36$0$17700$626a14ce@news.free.fr>,

> YBM <ybmess@noos.fr> wrote:

- > The people include Dennis Overbye from the New York Times, the
- > string theorist Jacques Distler, and myself. But when I checked –
- > I happened to be in Hong Kong when Overbye asked me about this –
- > there turned out to be no such institute at Hong Kong University,
- > and no Prof. Yang associated with this university.

Right. Anyway they manage to get the HKU street adress in the whois record of th-phys.edu.hk. It's easy to fake an adress when registering, but wouldn't have HKU protested ?

> So, at this nobody with any sense would believe anything they say.

Do you mean that they didn't "invent" the word "internet" in 1979 when talking about a network of computers as "an internex" or that they didn't write the scenario of the movie "Matrix", then stolen by Hollywood (as they said in fr.sci.physique) ? It is indeed very disappointing, you know : I've heard on TV they were the best physicists in France for decades.