I figured you were crazy but not stupid. Turns out I was wrong ...and I still think you're crazy.

I'm going to prove that even YOU should acknowledge that you're almost certainly just another crackpot .

> If Relativity and QM are disproved, which they have been – by me, then Theoretical Physics academia disintegrates, and they obviously do not want that to happen.

Do you actually believe that the reason REAL scientists ignore your crackpot theory is because they know that all of modern physics is wrong but are ALL, every single one of them, conspiring to suppress something as important as heliocentrism?

If your theory is correct, wouldn't you expect at least ONE grad student to recognize the genius of your work and have the integrity to point out that you're correct, ignoring the allure of the million-dollar salary he'd make teaching physics?

If your theory is correct, wouldn't you expect at least ONE serious journal to publish the news that GR, SR, and QM have been proven wrong?

Even if you're right, a more REASONABLE EXPLANATION is that there is no "conspiracy", and that, in their professional opinion, every last scientist here really, genuinely believes that GR, SR, and QM are correct.

And given the above, isn't it MORE LIKELY that the REAL reason every single scientist thinks your theory is manifestly ridiculous and that you're a crankcase is that, unbeknownst to you, you really ARE one, and your "revolutionary theory" is no more important than $god=U_v$?

Logic, reason, and integrity all demand you to publically acknowledge that you're almost certainly just another goofy buffoon in the bozo
