

Re: Speed of Light: A universal Constant?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics.relativity/2005-03/6139.html>

From: Sam Wormley (swormley1_at_mchsi.com)

Date: 03/28/05

Date: Mon, 28 Mar 2005 14:44:24 GMT

kenseto wrote:

Sam Wormley wrote:

- > Until there is credible evidence that they are wrong, they remain
- > the tools of choice in their domains. To find something wrong and
- > understanding the reason will be very exciting!
- >
- >
- > That's because mainstream physicists refuse to do experiments that could
- > potentially contradict SR.

That not true—there have been tens of thousands of experiment that could have knocked of SR, but didn't!

Crank Seto forgets that the has never been a prediction of SR that was contradicted by and observation. And that SR and GTR are continually used by the global positioning system (GPS) 24/7.

We thank Seto for registering at crank dot net.

<http://www.google.com/search?q=%22Ken+H.+Seto%22+site%3Awww.crank.net>