

Re: LIGHT SPEED = ISOTROPIC and BEYOND ??

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.physics.relativity/2006-02/msg02021.html>

- From: "THE_ONE" <floppy01@xxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 27 Feb 2006 22:56:38 -0800
-

To: David A. Smith

Thanks David for the recommendations.

The point I was making, is that after my recovery, I was not the same person at all. The previous me grew up going with the flow. Going with the flow, creates subtraction.

Beforehand to me, a city was a city. After the recovery of a fully functioning mind, yet with little memory of the past, it was extremely apparent to me that the city was designed for right handed people. Evidence was everywhere, the doors were designed for right handed people, the elevators have the buttons on the right hand side etc.. Yet before, I had grown up in such an environment therefore not noticing the obvious.

And so when it comes to understanding the complete mechanics of reality, this fresh awareness also bypasses any previous subtractions of awareness of the obvious.

I just don't want to loose what I have gained.

I am moving slowly because I always first try to understand a concept rather than using mathematics to think for me, meaning I prefer to keep the works of my mind, within my mind, rather than doing external mathematics which therefore produce Gaps in my step by step accumulation of understandings. I don't want to accidentally step over anything.

Blah Blah Blah.....

ANYHOW, I am now heading over to the web sites you recommended.

Sean

.