Google's counter seems to be broke. I'm getting
"2,830,000 messages" when I click on your author search.

But if true, you must be a serious rival to Santa Claus, who travels simultaneously down every Christian chimney on Xmas Eve.

Noel!

Heh.

I once did the same thing on Google. It took more than 100 hits before I ran across something that was actually about/by me. And it was an archived newsgroup post.

Even spelling out my middle name didn't help. (not really Auldfarb)

I thought about starting a club for David A. Smiths, but I'm not sure I'd want to belong to a club that would have me for a member. Ba-dum-dum.

Of the first few hits are mathematicians involved in physics (not me), professors involved in ozone (at some point, also not me), and a fellow involved in 3D operating systems. I am interested in physics, I have worked extensively in ozone generation/applications, and had similar bright idea for the next OpSys... to look and act like Halo.

Maybe there is more to the name than simply coincidence?

David A. Smith
