Re: Sorry, I've been having News Server Problems.

several years now I have asked you for the mathematical basis of your theory – you have refused to provide it. Now Paul is asking the same thing of you, and you keep dodging the request.

You are a dishonest man who has presented forged diplomas as evidence of a physics education and excuses as to why you haven't actually written any papers on the subject. Your standards of proof and evidence are laughably bad – if you were not such an intellectual hermit you would see the orders of magnitude difference between what you call evidence and what the rest of the universe calls evidence.

You will, as before, insult me and ignore my points. I, as before, will continue to be mystified as to why you are so arrogant. The theories you claim as your own are whatever sound-bites you can think of but not support [time has three subdimensions, space is logarithmic, $c+v$, etc] and Newtonian mechanics. You will continue to, as before, decry every experiment that proves you wrong as "unbelievable" as if someone who forges diplomas has any standing to say such a thing much less be listened to.

Your ideas will be forever trapped on this newsgroup because you are incapable or unwilling to actually write them down in a coherent way that does not depend on asking you what they mean so they can be published.

Re: Sorry, I've been having News Server Problems.

I wonder what non-response awaits me!

Yap yap!

This is what Henri Wilson has been reduced to – spouting off one liners rather than respond to criticism.

How would I know it's criticism when I don't read your messages?

If you're not reading Eric G.'s messages, how did you respond thereto?
