

Re: Bush Rx Psychoactive Use??

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2004-10/6099.html>

From: Maleki (maleki_m__at_hotmail.com)

Date: 10/21/04

Date: Thu, 21 Oct 2004 15:37:59 -0500

On Thu, 21 Oct 2004 11:52:00 -0700, Rick wrote:

> "Maleki" <maleki_m__at_hotmail.com> wrote in message news:m1fkzh0xlt2$.iu3jacilq3tp.dlg@40tude.net...

>>

>> Bush for a president has unique characteristics, very >> valuable for USA (and elsewhere) at this time. He listens to >> good advice, rather than following myopic, selfish, rigid >> Washington formulas.

>

> That's a remarkable claim, considering the one consistent > criticism of Bush, even from many in his own party is that he > does not listen to the best available advice, and instead attempts > to form his own realities that bear no resemblance to the truth.

>

He has been resisting the pro-Israeli "advice" in favor of what's right for USA, and not just for Israel. The pro-Israeli elements even started to resign from his administration to backstab him for this. I'm telling you, someone's noise is the other person's data. Right now Bush is the best for USA. Things are getting (have begun!) too dangerous for partisanship crap.

> I'm copying the following unformatted transcript for Google's > archive, of a speech given last Monday by Al Gore at > Georgetown University. Historians will know that at least a few > Americans were aware of the truth during the Bush era, and > knew the truth about this man -- a man who, for fun as a kid, > liked to shove firecrackers down the throats of frogs and watch > them explode; who financed both his campaigns for governor > of Texas on the backs of medical malpractice victims; who, as > governor, watched in glee while 150 Americans, including 62 > year-old grandmothers were murdered under the guise of > "justice"; and who, while as president, was responsible for > misleading America into war under false pretense and therefore > is responsible for war crimes and the deaths and injuries of > nearly 10,000 Americans and over 30,000 Iraqi civilians.

>

What a load of crap.

I was in Texas when Bush won the governor's seat against an extremely popular incumbent. I saw the political pamphlets he printed, as a matter of fact I was employed at that time in the printing firm that printed them for him! He had a policy of not attacking his opponent but agreeing to her good points and trying to be better than her for Texans, if he could. So along each opposing pamphlet he would print a supporting pamphlet but also showing by simple means that he was yet better than her. This strategy won him the seat because people in Texas are not fools (it's the only state that still resembles something of what USA once was).

He ran that office like no other ones before him. For the first time since I was there (since 1978) the entire neighborhoods would suddenly get empty of heroin and heroin dealers. Individuals that would get in and out of jail as if it was a weekend holiday resort suddenly were landed there with 20+ years on their calendars to mark off. You wouldn't see them anymore. They're still there! Crime dropped, employment flourished, loafers found themselves looking for jobs like others... I saw this with my own eyes. Close hand. When you people voted him president you didn't quite know who you'd chosen. Neither did those behind September 11. But I knew.

Individually, this man had always been a non-conformist towards balony traditions. That's how he's managed to keep himself open. He is different from a typical Washington politician. Before he became the Governor the media in Texas had ridiculed him for ages, calling him "bum", and his so-called advisors and family would force him to "go get a nice job to build your political career," and crap like that, and he would respond to them, "go to hell." Crap is not what USA needs today for its overall politics, because problems around the world are seeping in. You need a good listener with minimal ties to myopic trends and tendencies to slowly lead it to safety and remedy the problem. Just like Nixon. It is time for putting things back in order after twenty years of generating problems.

> I've been saying it since day one of Bush's presidency: if he > isn't the antichrist, he's doing one hell of an impersonation.

>

> Rick

>

sci.physics: Re: Bush Rx Psychoactive Use??

You're lucky that you have him.

--

```
tA nageryad tefl key nushad laban
tA nageryad abr key khandad chaman
"Mowlana"
```