Essentially? Because the interests behind the ban would never accept it. They want control, are afraid of losing it if they decriminalize them, so a solution where they can get control while people stops being criminals for having fun serves both sides well. It would be as socialist as a foodstamp`s card. A problem would be determining the right doses; if too low, nothing`s gained, if too high is like free for all. The fact is that drugs do have certain side effects that are no that desirable, it seems.
