

Re: peak oil revisited

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2005-02/8179.html>

From: Gordon (gordonlr_at_DELETEswbell.net)

Date: 02/16/05

Date: Wed, 16 Feb 2005 22:31:15 GMT

On Wed, 16 Feb 2005 12:05:05 -0900, doog <doog@toz.it.na> wrote:

[snip]

>

>Capitalism is guilty of profound crimes against humanity throughout history.

>

Are you insinuating that no other form of government or social organization has any of these undesirable traits? What should Capitalism be replaced with?

>

>The love of money[capitalism] is the root for all evil throughout history.

>

I suppose the love of money was not a significant factor in any of those tyrant regimes that have existed throughout the history of man?

>

>Claiming capitalism[love of money] is a good thing is sheer lunacy.

>

Being rid of Capitalism, and replacing it with??? Communism? Anarchy? Feudalism? or what ever, would be a major improvement, huh?

>

>Defending the indefensible is a lesson in educated idiocy.

>

As illustrated in the preceding post, here.

>

>Why not simply learn to share for the good of all our relations?

>

If you can provide means for generating and sustaining equal motivation and honest integrity among all constituents, this would work. The problem here is that people are not equally motivated, nor are they all honest. There always has been, and always will be those who won't carry their own load, but will grab "their share" of all that the motivated producers can provide for them.

>

>Why not make all in-common goods and services free for all?

>Why not barter for all un-common goods and services?

>

Then sit back and watch the freeloaders and deadbeats bleed the system to death, while those who were motivated and honest would be compelled to carry the bulk of the load...thanks, but I believe I'll pass on this one.

>usuryfree.net

>reformation.org/moneychangers.html

>abolishmoney.com