

Re: Big Bang or Big Splat? 96 % c in our reality but

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2005-07/msg01553.html>

- From: "T Wake" <taswakeAt@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 17 Jul 2005 23:37:08 +0100
-

"Mr. Knowitall" <ir911@xxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:FBACe.360\$Qj4.93568@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

> "T Wake" <taswakeAt@xxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message > news:zr6dnfwDDMOH_UTfRVnyuQ@xxxxxxxxxxxxx

>> I know you are new here, but well said :-)

>>

>

> I may be "new" to this particular newsgroup, but I'm hardly new to Usenet > or > the web...going back close to 20 years now. Generally speaking, I suppose

> I'm somewhat of an "elitist", regardless of the primary topic of > discussion

> for any group. Here's what I mean by that:

My statement was not meant to imply you are new to the world of USENET or the internet. I was simply pointing out that in a short period of time you had fully evaluated the insanity that is tj Frazir.

> I figure that if anyone wants to express their thoughts or ideas on any > subject, they should at the very least have enough care to ensure that the > content of their post isn't full of spelling and/or grammatical errors.

I agree

> There's no real excuse for it and anyone who posts such illiterate drivel > immediately loses almost all credibility in my eyes. I'm sorry to say that > a > shockingly large proportion of posters to this group fit that description.

Mostly the cranks.

> It took many years for me to give any kind of credibility to AOL'ers.
> Nowadays it's the Google posters and especially the WebTV'ers that I > almost > instantly dismiss as useless tits that are either too stupid or too > ignorant > to learn how to properly post to Usenet. They pretty much invariably > exhibit

Re: Big Bang or Big Splat? 96 % c in our reality but

- > the same characteristics described above and are therefore especially
- > annoying. I must say that I am somewhat astonished to find such a large - > proportion of posters to this group who also fit that description.

Yep. I agree. I think WebTV is the worst. Google has some bad posters but it also has occasional good ones. Same as when Deja let you post. Some insane crackpots would misuse it and some half decent people who strangely never felt