

Re: NMR combating terrorists

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2005-08/msg00462.html>

- From: pmlonline@xxxxxxxxxx
 - Date: 1 Aug 2005 14:07:13 -0700
-

jabara wrote:

- > > Says who? Maybe in Russia, but U.S. isn't scanning for nuclear
- > > devices. I doubt any country is.
- >
- > Says Me. You are not in the know.
- > The USA is, and has been, scanning for years.
- > You think those are only metal detectors you walk through ?

Then lets just cross our fingers you are correct. Like Dan said, there are dirty bombs that contain materials undetectable by such methods. Although NMR should be able to detect them. Additionally, NMR can theoretically detect any type of explosive.

Paul

.

- Follow-Ups:
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: jabara

- References:
 - ◆ NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: pmlonline
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: Sam Wormley
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: pmlonline
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: jake
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: pmlonline
 - ◆ Re: NMR combating terrorists
 - ◇ From: jabara

- Prev by Date: Re: NMR combating terrorists
- Next by Date: Re: NMR combating terrorists

Re: NMR combating terrorists

- Previous by thread: Re: NMR combating terrorists
- Next by thread: Re: NMR combating terrorists
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread