Thanks. I tried a variation on that, "big bang"+humor+jokes. It got me a fair number of hits but not and substantial ones. I'll go without the " " and see if there's a change. My favorite, and only one I know, is possibly a cartoon. Someone is saying, "Have you heard about the Big Bang", and the respondent is saying something like, "Do you mean Glen Miller, Harry James, Tommy Dorsey, or Fred Warning?" Personally, I use variations where I work in "Big Band", as I have obviously misunderstood the question. Maybe there's a newer edition of Tom Wellers, "Science Made Stupid" that has some.
