Re: My latest userContent.CSS:

To avoid middle-of-a-line (i.e. " inline ") images from overwriting text, I had to make most images one line high ! See:

Amazingly, that works great for me, as I can right-click the picture to see the full-sized image (and scale it up, if desired).

I have FireFox set up so that, when at Images.Google.COM, each full-sized image is just a click away.

If anyone knows how to ensure that inline images never overwrite text, I've love to hear about it.
I'd also like to know how to make the tag act like a horizontal tab.
