

Re: Usenet Servers going Anti-Truth/Faith-Based

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2007-05/msg00573.html>

- From: BradGuth <bradguth@xxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 6 May 2007 16:38:55 -0700
-

As long as you can exclude, skew and/or otherwise hide the truth, why not go all the way?

However, I tend to favor that a great many of the old guard butts and of their incest cloned replacement butts need to be retroactively kicked, and then some. Of course, our special-interest groups of those smart Third Reich and their dumbfounded Jewish minions, as for their having used those extra special conditional laws of physics, is what supposedly had us walking moonsuit butt naked upon our physically dark, terribly reactive, more than a touch salty and otherwise absolutely nasty IR/FIR roasting everything in sight to death moon, whereas those nifty laws of their conditional physics and hocus-pocus of fly-by-rocket expertise that oddly still can't be demonstrated, had actually prevented any detectable Kodak film damage, excluded most of whatever human DNA damage and otherwise kept that big old and nearby Venus from ever being anywhere in sight.

Perhaps those spendy folks of GR can further explain such odd physics, as though running so far amuck while merely a little off-world.

The General Relativity gang are circling the wagons / by Tom Potter http://groups.google.co.uk/group/sci.physics/browse_frm/thread/cc57b2d799e60438/343c46b98d7c47f4?lnk=gst&q=C

What an absolutely sorry mindfield or gauntlet of mainstream status quo or bust damage-control, of such horrific flak tossing over protecting their precious all-or-nothing GR butts.

Even "tj Frazir" offers a few too many truthful words of wisdom.

I'm fairly certain, if we gave those nice GR folks an extra trillion in tax free loot per year, they'd spend every last cent and they still would not be happy campers, nor would we have accomplished clean fusion energy to burn (sort of speak), not even within the next decade.

—

Brad Guth

.