Greig, neither the first nor the last time that this will be done.

Frankly, even as a physicist, I believe that the future leadership of our nation is far more of immediate importance than any trivial discussion about Newton, Einstein, or Fermat's Last Theorem.

And everyone else across the planet who reads sci.physics must suffer the consequences of your belief because...?

How about showing a little class by taking your political posts to a political newsgroup where they will be on topic?
Those with an interest will know where to find it.

Re: Who exactly is Harry C???

Greg, it seems that you are the only posted who has voiced serious objection to the educational material that I have and intend to continue posting. Why is that?

It's late in the evening here, and later in most other places where the readers are. I expect there'll be more people chiming in eventually.
