

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.physics/2008-05/msg01168.html>

- From: NoEinstein <noeinstein@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 15 May 2008 10:45:15 -0700 (PDT)
-

On May 14, 11:27 am, NoEinstein <noeinst...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

JOHN EDWARDS GOES TO JAIL.

The New Constitution will be a bastion for democracy and fair play in America! A democracy isn't about who you know, or how influential they think that they are. It isn't about 'networking' to get some leverage in an obviously corrupt system of government. And it isn't about pulling-the-wool-over-the-eyes of the electorate to try to use them as pawns for one's own selfish motives.

Barack Obama will look STUNNING in an orange prison uniform as he gives interviews while looking between closely spaced steel bars. Folks, screwing with our democracy is a treasonable offense!

Yesterday, John Edwards made an endorsement of his ideal for President. By that act, Edwards is influence peddling. He, like Bill Richardson, Tom Daschle, Bob Casey and so many others, has jumped on the teeter totter to try to counter each and every increase in momentum that Hillary Clinton gets. Those men are selfishly bent on padding their own nests. With each endorsement that Obama gets, he dilutes his might-have-been devotion to work for the best interests of the electorate. Instead, he must now work for the whims of those to whom he is beholden.

A good friend of mine told me that, while in office, Senator John Edwards of NC wasn't very good at his job. Apparently, Edwards dropped out of Congress just in time to avoid going down in defeat in NC. JFK was a well-liked pretty boy. With the proper goals and actions, Edwards could have been another such youthful presence that might have inspired this nation.

I now live in South Carolina. Very early I started getting pollsters phone calls. During such I was asked, regarding the SC primary, for whom I would be voting. Because Edwards had shown promise, and because he was born within 50 miles of where I was born, I vowed to vote for the man. Then, Edwards started flooding the TV with his campaign ads that touted how poor his family was when he was born in Seneca. Textile mills had closed, there; and Edwards kept saying that workers are worth every bit as much as managers. He vowed he would fight for workers.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Edwards is this multi-millionaire vowing to work for those he apparently feels sorry for. Edwards' ads were condescending and effectively elitist. Most hard-working people are wise enough to know that managers are deserving of more pay than they themselves receive. And most hard-working people like the idea that the potential is there for them to move up, too. What Edwards was implying amounts to socialism. Fortunately, SC Democrats were smart enough to reject Edwards' condescending attitude toward their condition.

As promised, I voted for Edwards. But I wasn't too sad to have him be defeated. However, the racist, mindless, and anti-democracy block vote of those 90 plus percent of Black voters for Obama, didn't boost my hopes for America. Clearly, Hillary Clinton was, and still is, the only qualified candidate. Yet, the shallow, racist issue that is now wagging-the-mongrel is: Get a Black into the Oval Office, and to HELL with the consequences for America.

Standing together on that podium, Obama and Edwards were these two selfish elitists who are vowing to help the poor. Not since FDR has such a platform gotten anyone elected to be President. So, as broadly as those two were smiling, the chances that the USA will be better off with them being on the same side is slim to none. And smiles à la Jamal Simmons should inspire NON trust, rather than trust. As with used car salesman, if they smile at the deal watch out!

Where there are inappropriate smiles, it's likely that there are corrupt dealings. Tom Daschle smiled when James Carville proposed that Clinton's supporters would pay to redo the Michigan primary. If democracy had been part of Daschle's and Obama's value system, they would have expedited letting Clinton get her fair share of the delegates in FL and MI earlier, rather than later! But as with the US Supreme Court, Obama supporters pick-and-choose to value the unconstitutional rules of the DNC above the fundamental RULE of having democracy IN a democracy!

So, as more and more people side with Obama's RAPE of democracy, newspaper columnists like Flavia Colgan smile at the fantasy. For her, it's not about doing what is right; it's about having one's own selfish enjoyment. Barbara Walters yielded to those same fantasies with a Black senator. Now, she wishes to elevate her own declining celebrity by bragging about: The blacker the berry, the sweeter the juice. Rejoice, whites everywhere, and SUPPORT the candidate of those who are not satisfied with their own kind.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

While the anti–democracy primary debacle plays out like the unsportsmanlike CAD that he is Obama is prematurely campaigning against John McCain. For Obama, it s a foregone conclusion the the numbers will give him the nomination. Actually, if anything gives him the nomination it will be the corrupt DNC s urging that the super delegates commit before the August convention. Those dreg, political insiders who do so by publicly endorsing that CAD, Obama, hope that their straw of support will tilt the camel for Obama and thus make Obama more beholden to that particular super delegate, or to his ilk.

It s a sad state of events when our could–be democratic processes keep getting defeated at every turn. As such travesties keep happening, the leaders who have been encouraging those very same treasonous actions, are evincing the same sick pleasure of a Flavia Colgan, Barbara Walters, or Jamal Simmons.

But where there be discontent, surely, there can be hope!

That moron McCain continues to read from teleprompters in front of a backdrop of American flags. And he is in direct violation of the New Constitution! Politicians, candidates, and government office holders aren t America! America is the PEOPLE, and their positive SPIRIT, collectively! Never again will those in government be considered to be the USA. Rather, those in government shall be THE SERVANTS of the USA, and of the PEOPLE! Never again will the American flag be allowed to be denigrated by having those be used as a backdrops by Government officials other than the President and the Secretary of State. Nor shall our cherished Stars and Stripes ever be used as a backdrop to legitimize a TRAITOR to democracy like Barack Obama surely is.

Those of you longing for A Change You Can Believe In should realize that you have been, and are now being, flimflammed! Barack Obama is this low life, MANCHURIAN CANDIDATE who will gladly destroy America if that advances his own selfish ends, and those of his corrupt endorsers like John Edwards. Remember, Adolph Hitler was a GREAT public speaker, too.

In the most positive vein, please vote for Hillary Rodham Clinton to be President of the United States of America!

Respectfully submitted,

NoEinstein

On Apr 21, 9:37 am, NoEinstein <noeinst...@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

SUPER DELEGATES CAN BRING AMERICA DOWN OR SAVE IT.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

At every level of our social, economic, and political existence FAIR PLAY has become the virtue least in evidence. Toooften the rule-of-thumb is: Do bad things unto others, before they can do bad things unto you. Such philosophy reigns supreme in the USA because: People see others getting ahead by doing bad, often immoral, and sometimes criminal things. By those examples, people figure they,too, have a right to get ahead in those ways. Would-have-been good people , are good whenever such virtue advances their purposes, and they are bad whenever such vices will benefit them. By degrees, the majority of Americans are& two faced.

The above moral decline in America can be reversed only by having people come to realize that most people will BENEFIT simply by having the great majority play fair! If there is a trickle down effect that benefits everyone, it is having people care about the effects of their actions on their neighbors far and wide. If businesses seem to have prices that aretoohigh, some feel such prices justify their shoplifting. But across America, shoplifting is a& cost of doing business that adds 15% to the cost of the products being sold. So, part of the cause of the high prices that some feel justifies their shoplifting is shoplifting itself!

When an American company can t be price-competitive without out-sourcing work to other countries, part of the reason for that is: the cost of labor, here, is simplytoohigh. And the other costs of doing business, are becomingtoogreat. Ask any company executive, and you will hear that the cost of providing health care benefits to employees has gone-through-the-roof. And you will hear that the cost of litigation due to product liability suits has gone-through-the-roof. As a defense , businesses employ expensive lawyers to side-step those lawsuits. And lawyers will do so by lobbying for laws favorable to businesses at the expense of those who have been harmed.

Folks, America is in DIRE STRAITS, because our businesses and our disparate groups aren t fighting fair. Toofew of us get the Big Picture! But if most could get the Big Picture and act wisely based on that knowledge the majority of the socio-economic problems that adversely affect every one of us would begin to SHRINK, and to the benefit of everyone!

At this moment, the single greatest threat to the survival of the USA, and perhaps to the survival of the entire human race is& BARACK OBAMA& His is a campaign that is rooted in UNFAIR PLAY. The USA is despised in many parts of the world because our capitalist philosophy seems to be: win at all costs, and to-hell with how anyone else in the world feels about it. And we are despised by many Muslims, in particular, because we support Israel. Though the Jews have suffered humongous and inhuman tortures and death, those acts should NEVER be allowed to become a carte blanche for Jews to act for their own selfish benefit without considering the consequences of their acts on others. The Jewish controlled media in this country is backing Obama, a minority candidate. Is that an endorsement that should sit well with the American people?

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Individually, Jews are some very fine people. I've had Jews for friends and associates. But as a race, Jews use nepotism, back room power plays, and immorality whenever those things will benefit their race. And they think that they have a right to act unfairly, because they are the chosen people. That Manchurian Candidate, Barack Obama, and Jews as a race are the two greatest threats to the survival of the human race. So, can everyone see why I am so passionately against having Obama become President?

Hillary Clinton continues to show her MOMENTUM in the Democratic race for President by winning most of the primaries in the last few months. Yet Obama keeps using his blatant, anti-democracy tactics to hang on. In a neck-and-neck horse race the winner is sometimes decided in a photo finish. But even a winner, so decided, isn't valid until the race has been reviewed to see if there are any late infractions by the winning jockey that might disqualify such.

The closest semblance of a democracy via the present, sequential-primary, debacle would be to have the super delegates vote at the convention to break the Clinton-Obama tie. But Screaming Howard Dean started pushing to get super delegates to decide early & for the benefit of the party. But what that's actually doing is encouraging those super delegates to endorse a candidate. As I have explained time and again in this post, the majority of the supporters of Obama do so because he shows the testosterone of a fighter. In their naïve minds they believe that by having a fighting President, they will finally get their personal grievances addressed.

Every two years since this country was founded, the voters have been sending fighters to Congress, and to the Executive Branch. But the USA keeps getting worse and worse off. Now, 82% of Americans are unsatisfied with the direction this country is headed. Ask yourselves: Is it probable that a mean-spirited, egotistical jerk like Barack Obama can convince Congress to suddenly correct deficiencies that those very same congressman brought into existence by their own votes?

After four years as President, Obama would be lucky to have gotten a health care plan enacted. And such plan would probably be a far-cry from the one that Obama now thinks he's figured out better than anyone else. As a rule: The success of a politician is in INVERSE proportion to the size of his ego. So, those voting for him can only rejoice at having ram-rodged-in the winner. But is doing so, worth DESTROYING the last chance America could ever have to correct its ills?

Most of the super delegates are party insiders. Maybe those have better judgment than the common delegates. However, the latter seems highly unlikely. As Obama argues to get super delegates to his side, those who yield show themselves to be shallow-minded, team-against-team thinkers rather than: Choose the candidate who s BEST for America thinkers.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

If and when my New Constitution gets ratified by the people, in a one-day national referendum, most of those super delegates will be put out of their career governmental jobs. But our selfish, elected officials, and most of the super delegates, would rather have the FAILED party system continue controlling this country, than to correct the flawed Constitution that has allowed the yearly decline in trust of the People for our governments.

Clinton has a huge case to cry: FOUL! , that is& unless she s selected to be the party s nominee. That s because the principles of democracy on which this country was founded have been raped by the parties; and to her personal detriment. Of course, she could sue. But most courts are corrupt places. Only by ratifying my New Constitution will the Judiciary be put in its rightful place: I ve made the Judiciary a lesser branch of government!

Presently, one group of citizens controls one whole branch of government, and effectively controls the other two branches. [Hint: That group begins with the letter a& , and often adds an egotistical E& after their names.] My New Constitution will put those a&s in their proper place or it will imprison those who don t fall into line. If the supporters of Obama are doing so for want of change , the best way to GET change would be to vote for Hillary Rodham Clinton!

I will not air my labor-of-love New Constitution to any person not valuing democracy in America. If you out there will just value DEMOCRACY as the most important issue for you, the economy will improve; the wars will end (or at least I pray, so); and the bad image of America in the world can start to improve. Unless the latter happens, the USA could find itself on the receiving end of terrorism that might well foment nuclear annihilation. So& is the economy an issue more important than the lives and security of your own children and& theirs?

There are a lot of Cooter Jones out there who can t think beyond the hoods of their orange hot rods. It s amazing to me that CNN keeps digging up these low mentalities to BARK for that dog Obama. In the past I ve been a blue (or yellow) dog democrat. But Obama is one anti-America TRAITORIST whom I will never support! The corrupt national media, in all of its branches, supposes that it will be Clinton s duty to unite the democratic party. But by a two to one margin, her supporters would rather abandon the party than to support Obama!

Never before in the history of this nation has she faced such a dire crisis. While the starch-for-a-smile, and headlights-for-teeth Jamal Simmons types keep SELLING Obama to the detriment of the human race, there is this lone voice of hope bent on saving mankind and bringing peace and prosperity to the world. My disproofs of Einstein's theories would, if our corrupt institutions of higher learning would allow it, usher in a technological REVOLUTION that would create new jobs and improve the lives of the citizens of the entire world! But the cancer of national corruption is in every area of our existence: social, business, educational, and governmental.

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

The time has come to Pay It Forward like in that made for TV movie.. If enough people will realize how showing our better sides can have a snow-balling effect toward improving our national and world condition, then hope will again rise in America. The present Democratic race isn't some game... It is a life or death struggle for the SURVIVAL
...

read more »