I think we should note from this that
– NoEinstein likes to hear himself talk
– He has only figured out one channel online where he can talk unfettered, whether it is on topic or not – The only people who have been willing to engage him are those who are also famous for using a newsgroup as a personal blog

Re: Campaigning is a 'Science', too.

Dear PD: Unlike you, I have a desire to make this world a better place. But you enjoy making put-downs of those striving toward positive ends. Like I've said before, you are negativity personified. Regarding my posting in just one spot: People know where to find me, on sci.physics, so that's where I'll be posting, whether you like it or not. NoEinstein

Please read the charter of the group, NoEinstein.

The newsgroup is not a free hosting service for whatever content you want to disseminate, nor is it to be used as a personal blog.

While there are no moderation and filtering controls on this newsgroup, your willingness to freely dispense with netiquette and be a public boor is also an open invitation to public castigation. You have no right to whine if your rudeness draws a sharp response, any more than you would have a right to whine if you stood on a soap box and started preaching your politics at a public swimming pool and patrons shouted at you to get the hell out.

You are now free to continue being an obnoxious, self-absorbed prick.
