

Re: National Space Policy: NSDD-42 (issued on July 4th, 1982)

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.history/2004-06/4855.html>

From: Scott M. Kozel (kozelsm_at_attbi.com)

Date: 06/27/04

Date: Sun, 27 Jun 2004 18:24:53 -0400

Sander Vesik <sander@haldjas.folklore.ee> wrote:

>

> cott M. Kozel <kozelsm@attbi.com> wrote:

> > tdadamemd-spamblock-@excite.com (Stuf4) wrote:

> > > From Scott Kozel:

> > > > tdadamemd-spamblock-@excite.com (Stuf4) wrote:

> > > > >

> > > > > Imagine during the biggest, most recent raid on Baghdad...

> > > > >

> > > > > All of a sudden turning off GPS the constellation.

> > > > >

> > > > > This would have had an effect reminiscent to that scene in a new Star

> > > > > Wars episode where in the heat of battle, all of the robot warriors > > > > > instantly become useless.

> > > >

> > > > Give it up, troll. The 1991 Gulf War utilized smart bombs without GPS, > > > > so your assertions are false, as usual.

> > >

> > > (By "biggest, most recent raid on Baghdad", I wasn't exactly thinking 1991.)

> >

> > No difference. The 2003 Gulf War could have utilized smart bombs > > without GPS, as well.

>

> Really? want to point out any type of smart bomb that doesn't use satellite > technology that they could have used?

The laser-guided smart bombs which were utilized in abundance.