I keep suggesting this to James Oberg over several years, yet get no response as to regards a book.

Okay, you whip open your TV Guide, and on the right hand page there's an ad that reads like this:

"In 1935 two men thought that humanity's destiny lay beyond the limits of Earth itself...to achieve that end they were both quite willing to sell their souls."

Then you turn the page and see a two page ad for a new HBO miniseries:

"THE SEA OF DREAMS: THE STORY OF WERNHER VON BRAUN, SERGEI KOROLEV, AND THE CONQUEST OF THE MOON."

With the ability we now have to do superb special effects on a limited budget, this thing could knock your everlovin' socks off.
