

Re: sci.space.tech and sci.space.science Frequently Asked

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.policy/2004-08/0441.html>

From: Alain Fournier (alain245_at_sympatico.ca)

Date: 08/05/04

Date: Wed, 04 Aug 2004 21:15:40 -0700

Earl Colby Pottinger wrote:

> Peter Fairbrother <zenadsl6186@zen.co.uk> :
>
>
>> I mostly want to post about technical space-related issues, and not about >> politics or policy – so where do I do it?
>>
>> If I post in sci.space.tech or sci.space.science it will take hours, or
>
> more
>
>> likely several days for the post to appear. No back-and-forth chat is >> possible.
>>
>>
>>> The moderated groups shall have a policy of merely redirecting >>> to .policy rather than outright rejecting inappropriate articles.
>>
>>
>> In either group there is a good chance that a post will be lost totally,
>
> and
>
>> not be reposted to sci.space.policy, as it should be. In fact I don't > recall
>
>
>> ever seeing a redirected post.
>>
>> Sci.space.policy is full of politics and the like anyway.
>>
>>
>> How about a non-moderated technical/science space NG? How hard is it to >> start a new sci. NG? Alternatively, how about taking either of >> sci.space.science or sci.space.tech, and switching the moderation off?

sci.space.policy: Re: sci.space.tech and sci.space.science Frequently Asked

>

>

> However the delay in posts allows people to cool down in thier responses.

> SCI.SPACE.TECH when a good discussion get going tends to stick to the tech

> details a lot better. Better to wait and get good informati