

Re: Just in Time

---

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.policy/2007-08/msg00275.html>

---

- From: Sylvia Else <sylvia@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Wed, 15 Aug 2007 11:16:23 +1000
-

Sylvia Else wrote:

William Elliot wrote:

A man, late for an important meeting, uses his time car to arrive on time. While he is there, he notices he had forgotten an important contract. So he calls home to the time just before he's leaving for the meeting. He picks up the phone then and is told, "I've forgotten to bring the Time Contract. Put it in the brief case now, before you leave."

Riddle of the day. Why did he call home?

Because that was the essence of the message that his earlier self had included with the contract. Standard causal loop stuff – don't want to create a paradox.

Sylvia.

Hmm.... no come back. Looks like I spoilt it.

Sylvia.

.