Brad,

They may have told Edison he was nuts when he tried to send high-speed morse code across the Atlantic, or when he wanted to perfect the lightbulb and mass produce it

They may have laughed at Ford's horseless carriage.

People may even have arrested Bell when he demonstrated his telephone in Philadelphia.

But, that doesn't mean EVERY person they say was nuts is NOT nuts.

Re: Solar powered lasers in space

Sometimes, Brad, sometimes, the ridicule some receive is well deserved.

Rarely, sometimes not.

In your case, Brad, in case there is any doubt in your mind (because there is no doubt in anyone else's mind reading this) the ridicule heaped upon you and your ideas, that ridicule is richly deserved.

In other words, deep down in your little black heart you really don't give a hockypuck about salvaging our environment, nor do you believe in the regular laws of physics, or in utilizing the best available science. Now I understand, fully.

I must also say that on occasion – I am sad that on that rare occasion – when you have been especially maddening, – I am sad that I cannot reach through the monitor and do you serious bodily harm or inflict lasting deep pain to you – preferably in a way that leaves you physically disabled to match in some poetic way your obvious mental disability.

Gee whiz, and here I'd been promoting most of everything you've got to offer (though no one is perfect, including Einstein or yourself),

I never claimed perfection – and I never asked for or sought your support. haha.. C'mon – this is the oldest trick in the book. The opposition pays all the whores pimps drug dealers to come to a meeting and disrupt it with their foolishness, and then they complain loudly, fight and generally tear up the place when they're asked to leave – and THAT becomes the story at 11...

The only way to deal with that is to have strong capable bouncers scan everyone as the approach the meeting hall, and 'persuade' 'undesireables' to move along... without a public outcry – again a swift kick to the groin to the baddest of these is generally sufficient – but alas, you cannot do this on internet! haha..

Re: Solar powered lasers in space

So, don't cry alligator tears to me Bruth – I know your game – and you feel yourself immune. You gotta know exactly what you're doing.

and just as I'd said that if I were ever put in charge, whereas apparently I'd be the only one forking out a nifty 50/50 worth of R&D matching funds on your warm and fuzzy behalf.

You have never given me funds for anything, you have never offered funds to me, you have never been asked for funds from me, you most likely have no funds to give to anyone anyway – it all being in your head. So, I gotta ask – WHAT THE HELL ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT. You either say things because it gives you a hard on for the moment to imagine they're true – so, its all mental masturbation – or you are fond of saying things that are damable lies.

Sorry, my mistake,

Yes. I don't want need or value your support. If you'd like to earn by gratitude and lasting admiration there is one thing and ONE THING only you can do. Commit yourself to not posting writing or even reading anything online for a year. Do, that and then we can talk AFTER.

as I'd rather stick with those ENRON/Exxon types that get loads of stuff accomplished, though spendy, polluting and even somewhat lethal as all get out.

Enron got nothing done and they ended up in jail and the poorhouse – so this makes no sense. Exxon is a respected and quite capable company that produces a goodly percentage of all the energy used on Earth. They have no idea of what sort of strategy will secure their survival and dominance for the next 30 years. Their behavior shouts this from the tree–tops. This is actually a quite hopeful sign to those who DO have a workable strategy.

I will finally say, that this resopnse by you to my commentary, though

Re: Solar powered lasers in space

not unexpected, is one of those rare times you are rather lucky I cannot reach through the internet and slap you in the face.

Face slapping?

Or groin kicking yes. Preferably when you read my stuff, rather than after you post. That way, the message is clear. Don't read Mook's shit Bruth – you'll get a pain in the nuts if you do. and you move on. See? If there is anything in the usenet universe that would bring me everlasting joy and happiness – it is that. Whenever you THINK about reading my shit, you get a pain in your nuts, and decide differently.

So, to that extent, I would like to kick you in the nuts. I get an alert that you've pulled up a post of mine, I reach through the monitor with my boot, and kick you in the nuts. I do that until you stop reading my shit. See?

After that, I don't care what the hell you do! haha..

Silly old me for being 100% in support of what your supposed talent and expertise has to offer,

Yeah, well, like Huey Long's kicking the whores and whatnot out of his meetings – I didn't ask you to attend in the first place. Move along! lol.

on behalf of your intentions of improving
our global environment

Since I would actually like to do something of value – I would like not to have to deal with you AT ALL!

on such a grand scale, and for the greater good of humanity to boot. I'll see what I can manage in order to return the warm and fuzzy favor with all the "face slapping" love and affection that I can muster.

Like I said, I don't even read your shit, unless its in response to something I've said, and then I generally ignore it. But since you took the trouble to say something nice about me – I wanted to make it

Re: Solar powered lasers in space

clear to anyone who reads this that I have nothing but the deepest sympathy for your parents – and want nothing to do with you. And if I could, I would kick you in the nuts whenever you thought of reading my shit – that way I wouldn't have to deal with you at all.

Why not just publish in Usenet whatever's needed to go on your pathetic and extremely lonely grave site, and call it good. Perhaps "Here lies Bigots–R–Us, Willie Moo" or simply "Up Yours, because I too gave up".
