

Re: space travel or war

---

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.space.policy/2008-03/msg00245.html>

---

- From: BradGuth <bradguth@xxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Sun, 9 Mar 2008 17:05:29 -0700 (PDT)
-

On Mar 9, 3:26 pm, Willie.Moo...@xxxxxxxxxx wrote:

Brad,

Truman, Eisenhower and others in the 1940s and 1950s instituted policies that they thought were in the long term best interests of the United States. Today, we can see in retrospect how those policies have not served us. This doesn't make these men evil or the center of some massive conspiratorial plot. They clearly made a mistake. The sooner that mistake is rectified the better off we'll all be. By casting this error as the center of some vast drama – you marginalize any discussion of our policy errors and make it much more difficult to bring about useful change.

The fact is reducing the importance of farming and manufacturing to our domestic economy and relying on allies for the bulk of our food and production has hurt us economically, and our systems for maintaining control of the global economy while operating from a fundamental position of weakness has undermined our geopolitical capacity to effect useful change without appeal to military force.

We are in a fragile position and need to extricate ourselves from it. The first step is a clear and frank review of our policies and what our options are. Calling people names and ascribing to them insane motives doesn't help in that process.

William

Once again, good luck with retooling from all of those well established lies upon lies in charge of your private parts, as well as having taken most of your hard earned loot. Remember what they did to JFK, and all he ever wanted to do was put a stop to our government interactions with those many secret cults (including our Federal Reserve), and to pull the NASA/Apollo plug before it was too late.
.. – Brad Guth
.