The Moon Landings were probably working to tighter margins than I am proposing for Mars.

I dont think the US government would now take the risks they did back in 1969. I dont think many people refused to watch because of the danger back then.

The people who volunteer and are chosen for this would not be the stupid people who appear on Big Brother who are chosen on purpose for their low intelligence to ensure an entertaining program. They would be the people with the best chance of survival.

I am proposing a return trip, although there is a good argument for setting up a permanent base with no plans for return to Earth.

Without them Zionist/Nazi wizards of our DARPA, you haven't got a chance in hell, that is unless you've got ten times as much loot as they took from us in the first place, and that was just for sustaining another ruse/sting phase of their mutually perpetrated cold war. Of course, USSR/Russia was doing the exact same thing to their fellow minions and village idiots. (it always takes at least two to tango)
