

Re Willie Mookie and the crap posters

---

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.space.policy/2008-06/msg00139.html>

---

- From: "Martha Adams" <mhada@xxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Fri, 13 Jun 2008 02:29:54 GMT
-

I think this newsgroup, sci.space.policy, is one of the more significant groups in usenet, or it could be. The exchanges between Willie Mookie and kT and BradGuth lately, illustrate a problem, and now I don't see recent postings from Mookie. That's too bad, for Mookie has technological knowhow and strengths anyone **must** have access to, for good thinking about space policy and settlements. We need him in sci.space.policy.

As for kT and BradGuth, if they go away that will be a major contribution from them to improve the quality of sci.space.policy. Indeed, it's probably the only good thing it is in them to do, if they can. But if they cannot, as I suspect, I've set my IE now to delete all postings from those two, and I should have done that long ago. I hope Mookie does this too, and returns to participate here.

Note to Mookie: is it rational to respond to irrational rubbish? ?? There are people whose work lives are centered on hearing that sort of thing week in and week out: psychotherapists, social workers, even (sometimes) police. If they can shed that stuff, you can too.

Titeotwawki — mha
[sci.space.policy 2008 Jun 12]

.