Yep, and thank goodness for that. It means we can spot him 100 miles away, no matter what alias he's hiding behind. And he's used some colorful ones, see below.

After the last major ISP in Canada kicked him off, he's been crying and wailing about it on can.internet.highspeed nonstop. Even the old regulars there who used to support him are now sick of him.

He's now with some obscure little outfit that some geek runs out of his basement (sound familiar?). How soon before this guy gets sick of him and kicks him off his service like Ralph Doncaster of ISTOP did?
